Description

A pair of Venetian hand-blown air-twist candle sticks in blush glass, circa 1920.

Venetian glassmaking dates back to the 13th century on the Venetian island of Murano, where artisans perfected techniques that became renowned for their brilliance and complexity. Known for intricate designs, vibrant colours, and innovative methods like filigree, millefiori, and air twist.

Venetian glass quickly gained prestige across Europe. By the Renaissance, Murano glassmakers had established a global reputation, influencing decorative arts and setting high standards in craftsmanship. Today, Venetian glass remains a symbol of artisanal excellence and historical tradition.
