Description

A George III mahogany side table with a single drawer, shelf, and lower jug rest, circa 1790.

Georgian furniture,(1714-1811), is renowned for its elegance and craftsmanship. It features a blend of styles, from the ornate carvings of the early Georgian period to the refined lines of the later neo-classical phase. Key characteristics include symmetry, proportion, and the use of high-quality materials like mahogany. Influenced by classical architecture and design, Georgian furniture often showcases motifs like shells, foliage, and intricate inlays, reflecting a sophisticated and timeless aesthetic.
