Description

A large Art Nouveau beaten silver brooch depicting lilies and set with turquoise, circa 1915.

Turquoise and lilies each carry rich symbolism. Turquoise, a gemstone valued for its calming blue-green hue, symbolises protection, healing, and tranquility. It's often associated with emotional balance and spiritual grounding. Lilies, with their elegant blooms, represent purity, renewal, and the beauty of nature. In combination, turquoise and lilies convey a harmonious blend of peace, purity, and spiritual rejuvenation, enhancing their symbolic significance.

Art Nouveau jewellery, flourishing from the late 19th to early 20th centuries, is characterised by its intricate designs and flowing, organic forms. This style emphasised nature-inspired motifs, such as flowers, leaves, and insects, often rendered in delicate, sinuous lines. Art Nouveau pieces frequently employed materials like enamel, opals, and gemstones, and featured innovative techniques like repoussé and cloisonné. Celebrated for its elegance and craftsmanship, Art Nouveau jewellery reflects a harmonious blend of artistic beauty and natural inspiration.
