Description

An Edwardian 9ct yellow gold ring set with a large cabochon bloodstone, circa 1915

UK Ring Size: M

Bloodstone, a striking dark green variety of chalcedony speckled with red or brown iron oxide inclusions, is a powerful gemstone historically associated with courage and vitality. Also known as heliotrope, its distinctive appearance symbolises resilience and sacrifice.

Bloodstone has been used in jewellery, talismans, and healing practices for centuries, believed to enhance physical strength, purify blood, and boost emotional stability. This mystical stone is cherished for fostering bravery, intuition, and protection, making it a timeless symbol of inner strength.
