Description

A Georgian flat cut garnet rivière necklace in closed back silver mounts, circa 1800.

Rivière necklaces are timeless pieces of jewellery characterised by a continuous line of gemstones, typically diamonds or other precious stones, set closely together along a single chain. Their design emphasises elegance and symmetry, with each stone carefully matched for size, colour, and clarity.

The term "rivière," French for "river," evokes the image of a flowing, sparkling stream, reflecting light beautifully. These necklaces can range from delicate, subtle strands to bold, statement pieces, making them versatile for both everyday wear and special occasions. Rivière necklaces symbolise luxury, refinement, and enduring style, cherished for their simplicity and dazzling brilliance.
