Description

A fine and elegant antique silver salver made in 1789 during the Adam period of design. This antique silver salver rests on four cast, fluted supports and the rim features an applied bead pattern mount. In the centre are as-yet-unidentified armorials.

The Adam style is a neoclassical style of architecture and interior design that found its niche from the late 1760s in upper and middle-class residences in England, Scotland, Russia and the USA and named after Scottish architect William Adam and his sons, of whom James Adam and Robert Adam were the most widely known.
