Description

De Vecchi believes that water has a strong relationship with silver and that it alludes to the act of pouring and offering water. Eleonore Peduzzi-Riva, lighting and furniture designer since the 1960s, designed this stunning Jarra water or wine carafe for the Italian silversmith. The jug appears to change shape according to the user's perspective or the angle of the light. A side handle makes it easy to hold yet it seems to melt into the body of the carafe that appears to lose its shape through a play of solids and voids. Limited production of 40 per year.
